As his selection as a speaker was a foregone conclusion, he has had ample opportunity during the recess to block out the committees and decide upon the various chairmanships. The members themselves generally wrote to him their views and aspirations. It is believed that before he arrived here that almost all the important places had been decided upon. It is understood that a few of the important assignments are yet in controversy. It is probable that Mr. Reed will consuit ex-Speaker Crisp and other Democratic leaders as to the minority of the representation on committees.
